The two prime ministers will meet before the New Ireland Forum has reported, but Dr FitzGerald said yesterday that the summit would complete the mormalization of relations etween the two countries which has been going on since he returned to office.

He said that yesterday's meeting with Mrs Thatcher had been cordial and that they had discussed future meetings at different government levels. As at their previous talks, little of substance was disclosed by officials about the dis sions. It was Dr Fitzgerald's second meeting with Mrs Thatcher at an EEC summit since he returned to office in December with the intentions of restoring relations between

Navy modifies equipment in the light of its Falklands experiences

By Rodney Cowton, Defence Corresponde

The Royal Navy has identified more than 200 desirable modifications for ships and equipment arising from experience in the Falklands conflict. They range from fitting better catches on some doors to whether superior Sca Wolf missiles can be fitted to Type 42 destroyers. Sea Wolf is standard equipment on Type 22 de-

Among the changes in equip-ment for crews is the provision of one-piece flame-resistant overalls compact enough to be carried around, which would be put on when a ship came under threat. Crews will also be issued with personal oxygen, known as ELSA (Emergency Life-Saving Apparatus), which provides eight minutes oxygen to give men time to escape from smoke-filled areas.

Several of the changes arise from the lessons learnt from the loss of HMS Sheffield, a Type 42 destroyer. It is believed that the board of inquiry that investigated the attack on the Sheffield by an Exocet missile launched from a Super Etendard aircraft criticized some of the Sheffield's operations.

The attitude among senior officers appears to be to attribute any such defects not to individual shortcomings, but to see them as an unfortunate, but probably unavoidable, part of he process of tuning up to peak fighting efficiency in the early stages of the first hig naval engagement for nearly 40 years.

Captain James "Sam" Salt, the captaio of HMS Sheffield, was very quickly given command of another Type, 42

In the meantime, came Vietnam, Watergate, economic decline, and other depressing and confusing events which have created doubt and a diministion of self-respect. The importance of the space programme receded and astronauts But after the doldrum years, space is becoming large again in One of the President's advisers says space activity is part of American machismo, and Mr

Reagan himself summarized the feelings of many when he greeted the first shuttle crew nn their return: "You have made us feel giants again".

Just as the early Mercury man-in-space programme was set off by cold war competition after the Russians took the lead with their sputniks, so the latest sians have been steadily building space experience and have determination to deny them space supremacy.

Last year, Mr Reagan said the United States "must look aggressively to the finine" and build a more permanent space presence with the aid of the shuttles. In his "Star Wars" speech in March, he voiced his defence chiefs' anxiety and talked of the need for space weapons and defence systems to counter Soviet missile threats.

So the goal is not something as relatively straight forward and romantic as the Moon trek. The talk is now of anti-missile lasers and space mines.

Defence related particularly on navigating satellites, is now a major part of space work. But industry, too, is increasingly convinced of the scientific and commercial benefits of space machines.

Satellites are big business and teams of lawyers are trying to persuade the Government to adjust the rules so that more satellites can go into orbit.

The Americans are planning a space station for the early 1990s. The shuttle programme's success has shown that such stations can be built and serviced by regular shuttles.

In an important change in the taking full account of the Polish EEC's attitude to the Middle East, the leaders agreed ouring their summit to unfreeze the aid package for Israel, blocked at the council meeting in Brussels last June after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

With the abstention of Greece, which has close relations with the Palestine Liberation Organization; the Community heads voted to allow the relatively small nmount of aid in a financial protocol already agreed to be delivered to Israel. The effect will also be to re-start official contacts between Israeli delegations and the EEC.

For the first time in years the leaders also did not specifically criticize Israeli policy in their declaration on the Middle East, although they expressed serious concern at the distress of the Palestinian civilian population.

The Ten called, however, for a prompt withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon, and confirmed their full support for President Geymayel in his efforts to re-establish bis Government's authority over Lebanon.

They welcomed Lebanon's peace agreement with Israel, and said they were ready to do all they could to support these countries' efforts to find a broader agreement.

Royal visitors' first week in Canada

Rude shocks and warm words

Ottawa

The Prince and Princess of Wales have received an exuberant and often uninhihited a welcome, as well as a few rude surprises, in the first week of their 17-day visit to Canada. There has been an outpouring of affection for the royal couple in the cities and small coastal towns of Atlantic Canada. In Saint John, New Brunswick, 70,000 people turned out to greet them. In Shelburne, a small shipbuilding town on the south-west coast of Nove Scotia, hundreds of people broke through rope harriers and raced down a waterfront street in good-natured pursuit of the Prince and Princess. Others were not so lucky. A visit to the picturesque fishing vilage of Lunenburg had to be squeezed into a mere 10 minutes because of delays in the royal itinerary caused by bad The visit has also produced its sour and perplexing moments. Canadians are still shaking their heads, for cxample, over some disjointed

Twice in the past eight years citizens of the United States have come tantalisingly close to winning all five championships. They last achieved this in 1939 when Alice Marble and Bobby Riggs each won three titles and Sarah Fabyan and Elwood Cooke shared the women's and men's doubles. shared the women's and men's doubles championships. With the reservation that Martina Navratilova was Czechoslovak-born, the US have a particularly strong hand this year. They provide the top seeds in all five events and, except in the men's doubles, have obvious alternative champions should the favourites fail.

Wimbledon is a remarkably American tournament. Most Americans have a high regard for the tradition it embodies and are equally impressed by its international stature as a commercially successful segment of the entertainment industry. Fast courts are prevalent in the US and Wimbledon's grass suits the American temperament. To risk a generalization, Americans tend to be more at ease than most in an environment that encourages restless impatience, excited improvisation and the quick results arising from relentless speed.

Two players of each sex can be given much chance of emerging as singles champions. John McEnroe's emotional problems and occasionally troublesome joints may be less critical than the fact that, as Ivan Lendl and Jimmy Connors have demonstrated, he can sometimes be subdued by persistently hard hitting. On the other hand. McEnroe no longer holds any grand slam title in singles or doubles and will therefore be highly motivated.

At the age of 30. Connors has learned how to shorten the rallies and husband his boisterous energies. His draw should not take much out of him and he has regained competitive confidence that, two or three years ago, seemed to be waning. Connors looks a slightly better bet than McEnroe.

I had a look at it. It was good in its own way, but it desperately needed rewriting and updating. How was I meant to do a good job on this King Lear, when no-one in the department had done any work on him in 300 years? Did I ever tell you this country is in one almighty mess? Sometimes I feel like taking it over myself and running it properly.

"I'll take this," I told the librarian. I went out of the library and down the steps, where it had started to rain, the way I like it. I didn't get much chance to enjoy the rain, though, because just as I hit the pavement a large car came off the street and almost ran me over. I rolled sideways out of harm's way and came op holding the card which tells people where to phone if I'm in an accideot, TLS, Arts Council,

I knew her at occe. Hard, professionl, sincere, passionate, melting, tough as old boots - she had to be an actress from the RSC. The opposition. I gave her my look, the one that makes people wish they were back at RADA, trod on her toes and walked on.

Something told me a lot of blood would flow before the Lear case was over. I had a feeling I was going to enjoy it.

sideways the British way of life

Adam the Gardener, the comic strip hero, is still alive somewhere deep in rural Britain, pruning his orchards up a tripod ladder, but he comes of a dying breed. The horny hands of soil, like good butlers, are difficult to find even in the country, where deference lingers on: As for the city, it is not even worth slipping a card in the newsagent's window; gardeners have gone to ground. Enter the new gardeners. Profitability Brown PLC who combine the clinical efficiency of an ambulance team with the financial ingenuity of a private doctor.

You can see them screech to a halt outside the best hairdressers and estate agents, lights flashing. Out jump the plant surgeons in their pale green overalls, clutching a siphon spray and transfusion of Baby Bio. It's a bad case. A broadleafed, six-foot yucca has taken a pasting. After weeks of unrelieved aridity, fed only by a passing cigarette butt and infrequent coffee dregs, it is wilting dangerously. A kindly cleaner had once wiped its pores with milk, which had brought it out in brown splodges. A clear case for Dr Gertrude Jekyll and Mr Hyde, the Supa Bupa for the Pukka Yucca. Their cure? A transplant. Out goes the battered drooper; in comes a sun-tanned stand-in, looking as if it has just flown in from

This new breed of gardener is not just for the swish public relations office and the advertising firm who like to give the appearance of a Somerset Mangham drawing room. Those townies who don't like to get their hands dirty can hire gardeners to swoop upon their crops. There is a London company which specializes in tending window boxes for those who can't cope with all that mowing and weeding. And there are experts in roof gardens, Japanese gardens, greenhouses, patios and water gardens. I dare say there is an urban tree surgeon (Motto: "Little oaks from large acorns grow") who will come and trim your bonsai with nail clippers. Last month's The Magazine, London's up-market free glossy, advertised the likes of those greenie-fingered gardeners who specialize in interesting trellis work", and a firm well known for their decorations for weddings and for planting window boxes and arms", which takes its money home in a wheelbarrow. There's big money in the bijon gardenette for those who are handy with a trowel.

There is also the small urban garden equivalent of an interior designer, who can transform that untidy paved area of concrete where the dustbins live into what estate agents would no-doubt call "an ontside room, with double-aspect wall hangings (ivy), trompe l'oeil vista (old mirror hung opposite back door) and Italianate urn garden (chimney pots with wall flowers)." I have a small garden (yard) myself which is in the process of transformation (looks a mess), but I have high hopes (am pretty sceptical) that it will be a perfect little sun trap (it has high walls) when my garden designer (my wife) has finished (spending a

Once it's done, of course, the urban garden can be just as exhausting as the rural plot. There is clearing the roof garden of the crows' nests; vacuuming the patio; hosing down the statuette; pruning the orange tree; replacing the spot lamps; washing the garden furniture cushion covers; deleading the fish pond; mowing the Astroturf clipping House & Garden. And many luxuries of gardening are forbidden. There is no room for a garden shed, so the fork hangs next to the ironing board. A good compost heap does nothing for neighbour relations. Dustmen sometimes balk at humping last year's annuals away. And, when it comes to bonfires, there's no smoke without fire

Still, there is nothing more heartening on a quiet summer's night than hearing the rancous squawk of a cocktail party enjoying next door's afforested balcony. What could be more countrified than smelling the acrid fumes of a dozen firelighters as they fail to ignite a wheel-on barbecue? The urban garden is designed for entertaining al fresco on the four nights of the year when it is warm enough. Otherwise, it is a good talking point as the rain washed away the priceless John Innes to clog up the drains and the neighbourhood tom cat digs up the daffodil bulbs.

Real men don't buy flowers

In the Interflora television commercial, a heartsick young man bounds into a florist and, before you can say Edna Everage, his girl-friend is presented with a giant-sized hunch of gladdies. This is not, interflora told me, a true interpretation of the service it provides. Most deliveries are made not as part of a scheme to declare passionate love hut to say "Happy birthday, mother", or "Get well, soon". In real life, most eustomers who make these little spontaneous gestures of affection are women and in this, its Diamond Juhilee year, the flower delivery outfit is trying very hard to persuade more men to say it with flowers.

According to the company's own research, the way men feel about entering a flower shop is the way they feel about approaching the lingerie counter - they get into a state of almost hysterical embarrassment. The bravest of them all try to . overcome this ridiculous weakness. My hushand, one year, when my birthday was due, stalked right into the late, much lamented Janet Reger boutique and asked straight out for a size 36, only fleeing in horror when he was asked "Underwired?" But he has nerves of steel; lesser men wouldn't have made it through the shop door.

To make things easier for them. Interflora is introducing a service called the Impulse Bouquet. They discovered that what men found perfectly ghastly was having to say. I'll have six tulips, some of those pink roses and a hit of fern, please". So the Impulse Bouquet is already made up and yours for a fiver.

Unless the one they love warrants long-distance delivery, men will still have to negotiate the shaming business of being seen holding a hunch of flowers while en route to their destination. Maybe they can slip it inside their jacket and pretend es something oon-threatening like a houlder-holster.

Once tender messages came silk-embroidered

Such molly-coddling wasn't always necessary. Soldiers in the Boer War gave their sweethearts heartshaped pin-cushioos with beaded pins that they sometimes whittled themselves. These tokens carried tender, silk-embroidered messages, such as:

"Forget thee never While throbs in my breast The heart that for ever With thee longs to rest Thou to me art a treasure Which hallows each spot Lisc has little pleasure Where thou art not.

Then I suppose word got aroundthat this kind of thing was sissy and the top romantic gesture became a box of chocolates with the wrong sort of centres. The Impulse Bouquet being less fattening is more acceptable, yet I don't know whether its ready-made appeal will be enough to lure men inside the flower shop. Flower shops may have to insist that all retail outlets are redecorated in dark panelling and that every effort should be made to cultivate a carnation that smells of steak and kidney pudding.

Options, Company, Woman's World...the titles of British maga-Woman's zines for women are as seductively inviting as their contents, those glossy pages crammed with cos-metics and cookery. Yet they might soon be overtaken by a new kind of women's magazine, one that sees women as workers rather than consumers. Japanese women already read such a magazine avidly, which has persuaded the publisher to go from a weekly to a thrice-weekly format. The title shows a true awareness of women's lot: the magazine is called Travail.

After the bulb season is over in April the boxes looked rather bare, so we planted miniature conifers, and euonymus and those little orange trees - and people seemed to like them. The great secret of keeping boxes or hanging baskets is to water a lot, and to dead head - which produces far more flowers... One of our more waggish MPs, whose name I shall not divulge, suggested I might care to infiltrate the Commons and pose as a new member. He told me that, with 150 hrand new faces, identity was a serious problem; he himself had hailed two of the new boys only to find out they were cleaners. I am afraid my mission would abort, for police have now armed themselves with pictures and even election literature of the recruits in order to help them identify the less well known physiognomies. One policeman, who has learned to memorize the faces of our 600-plus legislators over the years, tells me with deterring certainty: "We get to know everyone in time. Meanwhile, nobody gets in without identifi-cation of some kind." Ah well, back to journalism.

"Attachments between people and pers are viewed with about the same scientific interest as are soap operas and Barry Manilow's voice," writes Bruce Vogel, a veterinary surgeon, in a new book on just that subject. The book has been illustrated by Lalla Ward, the actress, whose previous publication in that capacity was about astrology for dogs.

Ian Bradley on the way forward for the Alliance

Forge ideas, forget tactics

Michael Meadowcroft, the newly elected Liberal MP for West Leeds, who has led his party's oppositioo to alliance with the Social Democrats, and Dr David Owen, the de facto leader of the SDP, who has never made much attempt to disguise his low regard for the Liberal Party, may seem unlikely allies. Yet together these two men are likely to be in the van of moves to forge a oew radical philosophy for the Liberal-SDP Alliance which will give it a more positive identity and position in the miods of voters.

More important oow than any tactical and strategic questions for the Alliance is the development of a radical, libertarian alternative to Thatcherism and state socialism which looks forward to the 1990s rather than back to the 1960s. It is not being unfair to say that in the election just past the Alliance was the most intellectually conservative of the three major parties, elinging as it did to Keynesianism, incomes policy and the other paraphernalia of what Ralf Dahrendorf has called "a better yesterday".

To a considerable extent this was a reflection of the leadership of the two parties involved. Roy Jenkins, undouhted libertarian reformer that he is, seems somehow anchored to the lariguage and concepts of the Butskellite era and does oot swim happily with the ecological, decentralist currents of the 1980s. David Steel has always been a strategist and tactician rather than a philosopher and has never tried to underpin his party's electoral success with the development of a distinctive and that Jo Grimond did.

It is here that Meadowcroft and Owen come in. Michael Meadowcroft is easily the most important of the new recruits to the Parliamentary Liberal Party. For the last 10 years be has been the supreme articulator, and one of the leading exponents, of the Liberal philosophy of community politics, based on the concept of developing a welfare state, or more accurately, perhaps, a welfare society, which is as an enabler rather than a mere provider. and on the assertion that human values must have the priority which is now given to economie values.

Politicians of other parties can dismiss such notions as vague waffle, as Lord Whitelaw did on last Thursday's edition of Question Time, but they may well strike as deep a chord in the emerging low-growth, post-industrial society of the late 1980s and early 1990s as Mrs values does today. Mr Meadowcroft has rightly been highly suspicious of the corporatism, centralism and straightforward conservatism that be sees in the outlook of Social Democrats. That was the main thrust of his famous dialogue with Professor Marquand during the Liberal Assembly in Blackpool in September 1980. But be may yet find that the SDP's new leader and, indeed, a good number of his supporters, are eloser to his own views than many who oow call themselves Liberals.

David Owen has always been the most intellectually radical of the Gang of Four. His book, Face the Future, has a very much more decentralist and voluntarist flavour than Mrs Shirley Williams's Politics is for People and William Rodgers's The Politics of Change. Much more than these other two, Owen has been Owen's philosophy which radical Liberals will find hard to go along with. On the evidence of Face the Future he is still wedded to the goals of economie growth and full employment in the conventional economy. He is completely dismissive in the book of those who would pursue a low-growth strategy and work towards a low energy postindustrial society.

Yet the fact remains that be carries around with him less of the ideological baggage of his Labour past than his colleagues in the SDP leadership. In that respect he has more in common than the others more in common than the others with a large section of the party's membership which is at least as radical (and, indeed, liberal) as many in the Liberal Party. With the SDP, in Parliament at least, now shorn of its deeply conservative right-wing Labour element, there are the party a real change that, it was east perhaps a real chance that it can get together with Liberals of the Meadowcroft persuasion to work out a new philosophical position which will offer the British electorate next time round something rather more inspiring than the mixture as before.

This, you may think, would be a Here I must make a personal disclaimer. I would rather put my head into the mouth of a lion in the Roman arena than get mixed up in a dispute over the height of Christian church doctrine or ritual; in these matters I am a paid-up, card-carry-iog, lifelong Latitudinarian, and a Jewish one, to boot, I took no part in the Reformatioo or Counter-Reformation, I have never been heard to express a preference for homoiousian over homoousian, or vice versa, and anyooc claiming to know my views oo the place in Christian belief of confession, purgatory or candle-sticks should be treated as an impostor. What is more, I am quite unable to see how the timing of the collection in a church could give rise to any question of orthodoxy or heterodoxy anyway, irrespective of the merits of the rival factions' claims to be the only guardians of the true faith.

Bot this makes me more, not less, confident of being able to pronounce upon the troubles at St Jack's. For whether the trouble there is concerned with the introduction of high ehurch practices, or whether it is more in the nature of an industrial dispute, I have to tell the faithful to be oot dismayed; it is quarrels of this kind, in parishes of this kind, which prove oot only that the heart of the Anglican Church is still beating soundly in the body of the country it was born in, but that that country is itself still undamaged, unchanged and unsinkable.

Rightly to be great", said Hamlet, Is oot to stir without great argument stake, and those who believe such an attitude shows that their church means oothing to them have got the matter upside down, inside out and back to front: it is precisely because they care so passionately for every blade of grass in the churchyard and every fold in the vicar's surplice that these weird and inexplicable dissensions arise among them, and it is because their faith is so deep and to them so clear, and therefore, so rarely troubled by doctrinal dissension, that a disagreement over the best moment for the collection can turn into a battle of wills that splits the parish and leads to charges of high-handedness mingled with romanism and heresy. Come is it not better for the choir to go on strike and the vicar to go on holiday than for both of them to go on an expedition in search of Albigensians exterminate? Is it not better for the organist to cut the vicar dead than for him to pray to God to strike him dead? men do, of course, hit other Englishmen over the head; but look why they do it. They do it in the course of quarrels about beer or football or one another's wives or, at the very worst, in the course of trying to steal one another's wallets. trying to steat one another's wanters. To suggest that they might take to doing it in the course of political disagreement would be regarded as a most outlandish idea, and the thought that they might do it in a religious cause would be incompanied to the point of incomprehensible to the point of embarrassment.

Long may it remain thus. The parishioners of St Jack-in-the-Life-boat will be accused by the short-sighted of a failure in their sense of proportion. But surely they have displayed a sense of proportion of supreme delicacy and wisdom; they have quarrelled over things that do not matter, and have thus ensured that they will not be impelled to do each other harm, rather than — as with the Irish, to go no further for examples — over things that do matter, thus allowing themselves to be led into cursing one another's souls or murdering one another's

"If anyone speaks of religion in England", said Montesquieu, "everyone laughs". That is perfectly true, but the Frenchman had missed the point. The laughter is directed at those who think it necessary to speak of religion, a practice to which foreigners are much given but which sn rightly think unneces ary. I will wager that even now they are not talking of religion in the streets of St Jack-in-the-Lifeboat. For what has happened there is that something disagreeable has been injected into the practice of their religion; the talk will be of organists and clergymen, choirs and collections, while beneath the talk their religion will continue to flow untroubled and unremarked. How the quarrel between the vicar and the choir is to be resolved I do not know, nor, apparently, does the Bishop. But we may be sure that the solution will be as English as the problem, and that not a drop of blood will be spilt in the course of it.

The economy: Israel's worst enemy?

In the face of hyper-inflation, a spiralling foreign debt now higher per capita than Mexico and a balance of payments gap which has already worsened by more than 30 per cent this year, Israel's unique economy cootinues to amaze outsiders by its ability not only to survive, hut also to support a staggeriogly expensive modern war.

Significantly amid the welter of recriminations which marked the hitter first anniversary of the fighting, there were tell-tale signs that a growing body of experts now believe that the populist economics, which did so much to clinch the 1981 election for Mr Menachem Begin, cannot continue much longer without catastrophe. By retarding the devaluation of the ailing sbekel - the Biblical currency introduced in a psychological attempt to wipe out memories of the fate of the Israeli lira - Mr Yoram Aridor, Mr Begin's third finance minister, has maintained something of a spending spree despite an inflation rate now running at 145 per cent. As a result, macro-economie decay (such as a stagnant growth rate) is matched incongruously by the sight of video retailers opening extra pavement counters to meet demand.

"Countries at war do not usually permit themselves the luxury of raising their standards of living", warned Mr Moshe Sanbar, a former governor of the Bank of Israel Mr Eliezer Shefer, n former deputy governor was blunter in his criticism. "At some point, the economy of illusions will have to be replaced by something more realistic," he "We cannot assume that the world will be willing to finance any deficit we choose to create."

Unlike most other countries facing such severe economic difficulties, Israel has so far been able to use its unique position to escape enforced financial restrictions from its creditors, or even political restraints. The idea that American financial penalties should be imposed for the creation of every ration, Israel's main benefactor. In an interview with The Times, Professor Assaf Razin, a former economic adviser to the Begin cabinet, disclosed that the government had recently rejected the offer of a $100m loan from the Inter-national Monetary Fund because "it did not like the strings attached, and could still go out and borrow on the could still go out and borrow on the international market. The professor, dean of social sciences at Tel Aviv University, warned that without a rapid switch in policy, Professor Razin compared the situation in Israel with a recent study of the economic debacle in Argentina. There, an attempt to reduce three-figure inflation by methods similar to those practised by Mr Aridor (namely, slowing the depreciation of the shekel against the dollar to stem the rising cost of imports) failed dismally. Argentinian inflation was 176 per cent in 1977 and 158 per cent in 1982, resulting in an IMF rescue mission, accompanied by insistence on a large devaluation to rectify a severe alance of payments crisis.

"Israel is now following the Argentinian experiment with the same disastrous results", he argued. "Inflation is soaring, the balance of payments is in a mess, yet the only thing which is saving us from a similar fate is American help."

But Mr Gad Ya'acobi, Labour's chief economic spokes-man, has warned that due to the ever increasing requirements of debt-servicing, net financial receipts from the American government will reach zero within the next 12

For the Begin cabinet, already beleagured as a result of the mounting unpopularity of the involvement in Lebanon, a potent reminder that mismanagement of the economy rather than military adventurism might yet deprive it of a third successive election triumph came in a recent opinion poll.

The dramatic May poll pin-pointed the economy and the failure to solve the Lebanon dilemma as the two reasons why the government's standing had fallen below Labour's for the first time since 1981.

In addition to the government's reluctance to cut living standards, Mr Aridor's freedom of action is restricted by a national antipathy towards high unemployment (the present rate of 4.7 per cent is seen as about right if new immigrants are not to be deterred) and a coalition agreement which promises financial inducements to many of the smaller parties in exchange for vital parliamentary support.

Still blessed with the personal backing of Mr Begin inside an increasingly hostile e cabinet, Mr Aridor has so far shown little inclination to deviate from the policy which he instituted last iber under the title of "proper needing an agreeable, inexpensive and sustaining meal is recom-mended to call at Chow's, a fish and chip shop at the Stockport Road end of Dickenson Road. This small business is managed with great efficiency by its Chinese proprietor and staff. One of the accusations made against the Labour Party during the recent general election was that it was not capable of running establishments such as Chow's.

After its defeat in 1951, Labour came to be regarded as the impractical party, abandoned doctrinaire dreamers with well-intentioned ideas but insufficiently equipped to translate those ideas into reality. Harold Wilson's election as leader in 1963 helped to banish that ootion. His celebrated speech at that year's Scarborough conference – the one about the "white heat" of the technological revolution - signalled a new kind of Labour Party, up-to-date, eveo ahead of the times, and eager to demonstrate its managerial talents.

After the 1964 victory, Labour for a time really looked as though it was going to realize its prime minister's ambitions and come to be regarded as the natural party of government. At long last, its cabinet was accepted as a match for the Conservative's when it came to the test of administrative skill.

That reputation was preserved during the years of opposition between 1970 and 1974, and was renewed when Labour regained office nine years ago. The party's stablility in government survived the lack of a parliamentary majority. Even during the unhappy time of industrial unrest at the end of Mr Callaghan's administration, his ministers were never thought less than competent.

It was therefore an unwelcome shock during the election campaign to discover that after all this time Labour was once again being popularly indicted for its alleged mability to run a fish and chip shop. The charge was levelled particularly n relation to the party's stated aim of reducing unemployment to a million or less.
On the face of it, this objective vas reasonable and obtainable. We were promising no more than that we intended to cut unemployment to the level Mrs Thatcher inherited four years previously: a level which she successfully persuaded the electorate was intolerably high. Yet voters clearly judged that we could far apart as the market in Coinc. Lancashire, and the shopping centre in Hornchurch, electors made clear to me that they had absorbed all our carefully marshalled statistics: the £17,000m on financing unemployment, the £12,000m annually being iovested abroad because of the abolition of exchange controls. They knew the explanations by heart; the trouble was, they were not convinced by them,

Moreover, though national sentiment was plainly hostile to con-tioued membership of the European Economic Community, voters feared that withdrawal simply could not be accomplished without damage to employment. At meeting after meeting I painstakingly explained bow their massive trading surplus with British would compel our EEC partners, in their own interests, to arrive at an arrangement which would protect the jobs of our workers as well as of those on the Continental mainland. I was heard with respect, Audiences clearly felt I was trying my best. They were not. however, persuaded by my logical arguments.

Labour, after a loog period of credibility with the electorate, has become incredible again. It last happened a quarter of a century ago. In the 1959 election, Labour's campaign was going swimmingly until the party leader, Hugh Gaitskell, declared that his programme could be financed without an increase in income tax. People could do sums, and they came to the cooclusion that Labour's did oot add up. The party was pulverised at the polls.

In the 1983 election, the defeat of memployment was central to Labour's appeal. However, too many voters had been conditioned to believe that noemployment was a problem so intractable that it would respond only slowly to complex measures. When we insisted that we could solve it relatively quickly, and in a simple way, it sounded too good to be true. What should have been our greatest advantage was turned into a drawback.

Among all the challenges the abour Party faces as it enters into this long dark night of prolonged opposition, the greatest is the recovery of credibility. Once we begin to achieve that, we shall start to look like an alternative government. No one persoo can win back credibility for the party. Nevertheless it is a test which any serious aspirant in the leadership election will have to pass.

I found this particularly galling, as both parties during the final stage of the campaign in the constituency l was fighting bent their major effort towards persuading Alliance supporters to vote tactically for one of them. Mind you, if they were hearing on the doorstep the same message as we were, they were right to do so. A great number of voters were tempted to support us but were tempted to support us but afraid to do so, either (on the one hand) because it might let the Labour Party in, or (on the other) because it would split the anti-Tory

The Conservatives raised the bogey of an Alliance vote letting in the wild left, and Labour canvassers the wild left, and Labour canvassers told SDP supporters on the doorstep that they "might as well not bother voting". "A vote for the SDP is a vote for the Tories", blared the Labour loudspeaker van, and a final Labour leaflet, headed "Polls Latest", published wholly fictitious figures which put our support a third below what in fact it was. The Conservatives accused me of being a Conservatives accused me of being a "very socialist lady" (n contradiction in terms?) and a threat to personal freedom. All this is fair play in elections.

you will say. That may well be, but it was a bid for tactical votes if I ever saw one and the two old parties are deluding themselves and us when they describe this process as a somehow "undemocratic" new element introduced by the Alliance. I do, however, regard the search for diversion from the serious dis-cussion of political issues, and if we custion of political issues, and if we custion of political issues, and if we count the candidates of the majo tactical votes as a dangerous parties into a two-party system, we are going to get more of it. This will mean more cynical incitement to negative voting, more manipulation of poll data, real and invented, and an even shriller insistence that only two possible political stances exist both of them adversarial and oversimplified the anti-socialists and the anti-Tories. By defly "disappear-ing" the Alliance vote into one of these notional power blocks, both sides claim a victory, spoiled only (in the case of the losing side) by our

The Labour candidate, oo the other hand, expressed support for the principle of PR, but proved uncharacteristically gradualist in his approach. He was nervous about approach. He was her vous about introducing it just yet. First, he suggested, the electorate had to be de-brainwashed through public ownership of the press.

PR must come, if justice is to be done, and I trust that many column inches will be devoted to the subject over the next few years. For the moment, however, let me float an interim idea inches will be devoted to the subject alternative, perhaps interim, idea that was suggested to me by a young first-time voter. It would at least deal with the problem of tactical

The proposal would involve only minimal change. One-member con-stituencies would remain and each voter would still have one vote, but the voter could choose whether to cast it negatively or positiviely. The cast it negatively or positively. The 60 per cent of voters who (according to Professor Ivor Crewe's recent research) feel more strongly against one party than for another could cast their votes accordingly, as a minus, without any tactical calculation. The remaining 40 per cent lation. The remaining 40 per cent would vote as they do at present for the party of their choice. In this situation it would be in each party's interest to build up its own positive support rather than rubbish its opponents, and we might actually experience more constructive, creative, less poll-ridden election campaigns.

The system might, of course, have a wholly other and bizarre result parties, Canked by their agents and party workers, rosettes wilting under the strain, tensely watching the mounting piles of pros and antis, desperately willing them to even out and vying with each other to achieve, at the end of the day, tho smallest negative balance. But, meanwhile, those other insignificant little piles, put to one side by the tellers like so many disregarded one pound Monopoly notes, could actually be chalking up victory: 163 positive votes for the Monster Raving Loony Party, 302 for the Workers Revolutionary Party, 693 for the Ecology Party. the Stuttgart European summit, whether £450m is an adequate rebate on Britain's 1983 budget contribution but whether anything has actually been settled at Obviously, £450m is not as good as the £650m which Mrs Thatcher was understood to be demanding, but now says she never mentioned. It was, however, as good a figure as Britain could realistically hope to get, and it was £200m better than France had been initially willing to concede. Whatever Mrs Thatcher may have said or implied beforehand about expecting more can reasonably be put down to negotiating tactics, and it would be wrong to think that in settling for £450m she has been "humiliated".

But is it certain that the £450m will actually be paid? Unfortunately it is not. The agreement is only a provisional one, and the French delegation asked that the minutes of the meeting should record France's intention to oppose payment of the rebate if there was no agreement on a long-term solution by the time of the next summit, to be held in Athens in December.

The December deadline for a long-term reform package was accepted by all, and that is the only really significant decision taken by the Stuttgart summit, The leaders of the Ten have committed themselves to solve the problem by December, but the key issues involved have yet to be tackled. Another such area is the need to finance new Community policies outside agriculture, for instance regional development and energy. Such policies are keenly desired by most of the poorer members of the Community as a way of getting more money out of it. They are also seen as a carrot dangled in front of the British. Britain should agree to an increase in "own resources", it is argued, because this would permit the adoption of such new policies, from which - unlike the common agricultural policy - Britain could expect to be a net beneficiary. Mrs Thatcher has so far proved impervious to this blandishment. If spending on agriculture were cut to a reasonable level, she says, it would be perfectly possible to achieve a balance of policies within the existing resources. True enough, but given the political weight of farm lobbies in so many memberstates - what would be economically reasonable is unlikely to prove politically realistic. The third area to be examined is the cost of the proposed enlargement of the Community to include Spain and Portugal. fight, between and now and December, to impose some limits on agricultural spending. The fight will be a very hard one, and Mrs Thatcher is certainly right not to have surrendered in advance her strongest negotiating card, namely agreement to an increase in own resources. But it is quite clear that, as part of an overall long-term bargain, this card will have to be played; and the prospect of enlargement, bringing in two relatively poor countries which will make substantial net demands on the budget, will provide a politically more acceptable context in which to play it.

The rough shape of the longterm package can thus be discerned. Britain will have to concede an increase in own resources, as the price of a fairer distribution of those resources. France will have to agree to speeding up enlargement, because the raising of the financial limits will be made conditional upon it. The main argument will be over the cost of the CAP, especially as France and Italy will want more money spent on Mediterranean products to protect them from the adverse consequences of Spanish and Portuguese competition. In this argument, Germany should be on Britain's side but Greece, which now takes over the chair, has an obvious interest in taking France's.

For all that, according to normal Community reckoning, there are only three working months left, since nothing is allowed to happen in July or August. Sir, I welcomed much in Mr Andrew Tessier's article (Industrial Notebook. June 14): he outlined succincily the growing contribution which consultancy firms are making to Britain's overseas earnings. As he rightly says, with the gains from the oil sector due to flatten out before too long, and with Britain's manufacturing exports hampered by the recent cut-backs in our industrial capabilities, we shall increasingly need to foster the service businesse like consultancies, through which we can "export" the skills and experi-ence with which Britain is so richly endowed.

The public-sector industries have recently taken active steps to exploit their UK-based skills and experience so as to build up overseas project consultancy businesses. Figures just available show that the corporations together earned £342m from overseas consultancies last year - an expansion of £124m in a year when the worldwide recession made project consultancy a very tough business to be in.

In pursuing that business, however, they have consciously chosen to mix sweat with their private-sector colleagues - both with privatesector manufacturing companies, on whom they rely heavily as suppliers, and with private-sector consultants. For example, British Rail's consul-tancy company, Transmark, as well as undertaking 91 projects in 27 countries and producing a "bottom line" firmly in the black, has been making extensive efforts to develop a UK-based joint venture company, with the private sector, able to

Social democracy

From Mr David L. Alfred

Sir, Your discussion (June 11) of the nature and development of social democracy in postwar Britain is bopelessly confused both in analysis and in language. What is the connection between the leader's title ("She has broken the mould") and your assertion that "we are all social democrats now? The statement that SDP politicians are trying to escape from their socialist past rests on the false identity of socialism and social democracy.

Far from explaining the latter (which, by the way, is not a "model"), Arthur Seldoo only confuses it with the social market economy. It is, or should be, patently obvious that the goal of Thatcherite Conservatism is to break the mould of social democracy which it reviles as namby-pemby, wet, consensual nanny-statism. This is clear from the policies you recommend, in the mystifying name of "growth and enterprise", such as resisting "re-inflation" (reflation?). reducing taxation (for whom?) and abolishing wages councils (at whose cost?). Your comments oo the welfare state are opaque. Compared with public access to welfare in prewar Britain or with other countries today, eg Spain or the USA, it is not only not inefficient but also much more fair. Your narrowness of vision and bardness of beart (if shared by the Government, portending grave social and political danger) is transparently revealed by your attitude to anemployment.

What on earth do "statistical morality" and "statistical unemployment" mean? You say that toleration of unemployment increases with rising rates of inflation. Yet you previously argue that the Government's main task is to reduce inflation and bring it down further than it is already. Were this to happen, would it oot follow that existing or even lower rates ol unemployment would again become "politically unacceptable" as they were as little as just over 10 years lo your third leader, you employ the oegatively emotive words "dogma" and "extremism" to qualify existing Labour Party policies, whilst implicitly recommend-ing those of Seldoo and Thatcher as exemplars of flexibility and moderation, conveniently ignoring their open commitment to "cooviction politics", which separates them so

Feeding Roman troops

From Sir Andrew Gilchrist

Sir. The results of the archaeological investigation into the decayed scraping of a Roman military latrine and cesspool on the Antonine Wall (The Times, June 3) are indeed ascinating and they might well form a starting point for further inquiry.

The prominent position of wheat in the diet of the troops raises the question of the origin of the grain provided by the quartermaster, or commissary, sufficient to feed perhaps eight or ten thousand men right across the Antonine Wall. The well preserved storage pits at Rough Castle indicate the size of the requirement.

How were those storage chambers actually filled? By sea from England, with deliveries at ports on the Firth of Clyde estuaries and thence by land transport along the wall? A very heavy transport commitment, and what traces remain (archaeological, written, graphical) of the vehicles myolved?

Or did the climate of Scotland at that time favour the cultivation of wheat and were the local natives sufficiently agrarian, civilized, peaceful and friendly to cultivate wheat and sell it to the Roman garrisons? Were the wild Picts in

For example his complaint that the public-sector consultancies nefarious practice, which is keeping the cost of air travel in western Europe at an artificially high level. The European Commission and the British Government, both of whom seek a more liberal regime, may also be able to exploit the judge's verdict.

However, it now seems unlikely, in spite of the judge's favourable remarks, that the rest of the case can be carried much further. This is not because the case lacks merit. I am advised that I have a good case and it speaks for itself that it took nearly an hour to deliver the judgment on one of the preliminary issues.

No, the battle has now become purely one of cost, rather than of argument or merit. The total bill so far is now well into five figures. Most of this has been covered by the travelling public, mainly members of the International Airline Passenpers' Association. But if we now proceed to the next stage, discovery of documents, we will cross the £100,000 boundary. Sabena's counsel have then promised us 30 important points of law, which would undoubtedly consume several weeks in the High Court and several hundred thousand pounds in legal

All this raises a question far more important than the cost of air travel. A major public industry may well be breaking the law. They may be illegally overcharging the public for an essential service. Billions of pouods every year are involved. And yet, so tortuous and costly are the law's procedures that no one is able to clarify the matter and stop the alleged illegality.

The 10 governments feel politically restrained and prefer not to act. The Commission is afraid of the governments, the airlines have a vested interest in the status quo and the travelling public, many of wbom deeply resent high European air fares, are not well enough organised for effective action.

There remains the business community. And it is here that I believe our best hope lies. Chambers of commerce, institutes of directors and professional associations all have members who travel to the Cootinent regularly. Since we are an island, they have to fly. They are the ones who stand to gain, if Freedom of the Skies succeeds. And they have the necessary funds, a large amount by most standards but small when compared to the money that is ultimately at stake.

Having taken the campaign two or three steps along a long road, I would willingly hand Freedom of the Skies over to any organisation. public or private, that was able and determined to proceed with this case, elarify the law, outlaw the monopoly and admit the private sector on a competitive basis. The result. I am convinced would be scheduled west European air travel at around 50 per cent of present tariffs.

Yours faithfully, NICHOLAS BETHELL, Chairman, Freedom of the Skies Campaign, As from: 73 Sussex Square, W2

Sir. If Mr Fordyce (June 10) imagines that by crossing the Atlantic rather than the Pentland Firth he would continue to enjoy cheap inland air travel, he could encounter some unwelcome sur-

Last month I travelled from Chicago. Illinois, to Sioux Falls, South Dakota. The special promotional fare (for British visitors to the USA) was £176.80, round trip. The distance lies about midway between London-Inverness and London-Orkney. The rate per mile is lower than BA's £173. London-Inverness, hut the rate at the normal fare (about £210) would be higher.

The fares between some other American cities may be lower, or higher. It's too bad if, like Mr Fordyce, you have to go in guite the wrong direction in order to obtain a bargain,

Yours faithfully, E. W. LOWDEN, 42 Burke's Road. Beaconsfield. Buckinghamshire.

Royal Borough rates

From the Leader of the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea Council

Sir. Your article of June 7 demonstrates with crystal clarity the position in which the ratepayers of the Royal Borough of Kensingtoo and Chelsea find themselves as a result of the crushing burden imposed upon them by the Greater London Council and Inner London Education Authority.

Only 16 per cent of this year's rate bill is attributable to the expenditure of this council. The remaining 84 per cent goes to our preceptors. As your article illustrates, the burden upon our raicpayers comes about as a result of the high ratable values which individual properties bave. The ILEA levies a rate of 77p in the pound and the GLC 38.9p in the pound. Such a rate levied upon boroughs with low ratable values is of course very much less serious for the occupiers of premises in those boroughs than for the occupiers of premises in Kensington and Chel-

It is clearly outrageous that the average rate payment is the highest in England in the royal borough when its own council has by far the lowest budget of any London borough and substantially the smallest staff per head of the population. It is for this reason that it has in recent years been the policy of the council to seek to persuade the Government to introduce legislation to abolish the GLC.

We therefore welcome with much enthusiasm the commitment on behalf of the Conservative Party to abolish that authority with all due speed. Now the Government have been resoundingly re-elected they will have the enthusiastic support of this council in their most desirable

I have no doubt that that will have a significant effect upon the bills of our hard-pressed ratepayers. whose plight has been so vividly portrayed in your article.

Yours faithfully NICHOLAS FREEMAN, Leader. Royal Borough of Kensington and Town Hall, Kensington, W8.

Shooting to eat

From Dr W. E. Griffiths

Sir, Miss Janet Barber (June 2) speaks of the importance of rats and insects as food in some African countries. In the part of Northern Zambia where I served as a mission doctor rats were considered a great delicacy. The main hazard involved in their consumption lay in being hitten by snakes when digging in likely looking boles, Termites (white ants) were also highly prized. These are eaten at the stage of their life cycle when they acquire wings for a brief flight, after which they fall to the ground and are gathered up. Occasional severe cases of food poisoning have been attributed to this source.

The anthropologist, Father Aylward Shorter, has described, in Priest in the Village, bow he shared a Christmas pudding with a Tanza-niao friend. The latter, greatly appreciative, described the pudding as tasting just like bee grubs served in boncy.

I am Sir, yours etc. WILLIAM GRIFFITHS, Plymouth General Hospital, Greenbank, Longfield House, Longfield Place, Plymouth.

Rome, Italy. June 7.

Sir, Whichever green hills Mr Oliver Barratt (June 7) was gazing at from Argyll in 1969, Errigal in Donegal was oot among them. Its distinctive cone-shaped peak is covered in light grey glacial debris with white quartzite facings. Having elimbed it many times and last seen it three days ago I can confirm that it is about as verdant as today's copy of The Times.

Since he believes he was able to see around corners (or at least round the curvature of the earth) on that day perhaps Mr Barran was acqually contemplating Fujiyama, the Sacred Mountain of Japan, to which Errigal bears a strong resemblance. All at sea

From Mr P. J. Cook

Sir. Where are your sense of proportion and your generosity when you say (report, June 15) that a man who rows from America to the Great Barrier Reef "fails to conquer the Pacific"?

A glance at The Times Atlas will show you that Mr Bird has put behind him the Pacific and all but 30 miles of the Coral Sea. Some failure.

I for one salute this remarkable achievement and hope that, while commiserating with his misfortune in the final stage, we will grant him the hooour that he has surely earned.

Yours faithfully, P. J. COOK, 102 Westcott Street, Hull. North Humberside.

The Overseas Development by the Ordnance Survey, whose Administration, a government department, broods over a clutch of scientific and special units. Four of these are its direct dependencies, the Centre for Overseas Pest Research, the Tropical Products Institute, the Land Resources Development Centre, and the Directorate of Overseas Surveys. They deal respectively with pest control, the handling and storage of tropical products, inventories of physical, biological and economic land resources, and mapping. They consume only one per cent of the aid budget, but the relative importance of their work within the aid programme is far more than that. They disseminate knowledge and techniques and they supply services and training that are basic to the success of agricultural development in poor countries. They are among the most cost-effective public agencies for promoting the economies of developing countries. Their utility is matched by their reputation with foreign governments, international organizations, and their scientific peets.

They have recently been Raynered, caught by the wind of cost-cutting that has blown through Whitehall from the desk of Sir Derek Rayner (who has now moved on). All are to have their staff and budgets cut, two are to be merged, the activity of one is to be cut by half, and the Directorate of Overseas Surveys' map-making is to be awarded to disseminating knowledge and private concerns while a rump of having a public record of the supervisory staff will be taken in results of particular projects.

SCRUTINY OF THE SCRUTINEERS

own status is in doubt. This drastic stripping-down of the scientific and surveying element in the overseas aid programme has now been examined by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Commons. The Committee does not like what it sees. It has written a scathing exposure of the superficiality (the word is ours not the committee's) of the processes leading to these changes. It judges them harmful to the interests of developing countries, and to British interests. The report is without division or dissent. It asks that the decisions just taken be suspended while other options for the structure, management, staffing and financing of these units are considered. It makes its

The committee has the following criticisms of the scrutinies that prepared the way for the decisions it contests. Although they purported to be concerned with efficiency, they dealt only with costs and not with the relationship between costs and benefits. They were limited to the United Kingdom and did not assess developing countries' need for the units' work and the value and effectiveness of that work. The views of foreign governments and international agencies were not sought. No serious account was taken of the value of training provided here and abroad, or the importance of

The accumulated experience and inter-disciplinary expertise that contribute so largely to the quality of the work done was acknowledged in the Rayner scrutinies, but means were lacking of including them in cost comparisons with private agencies, so they were not taken into account. The "customer-contractor" principle which Lord Rothsehild sought to apply to the research councils was misapplied in this instance. Developing countries' need for these services was equated with the diminishing effective demand generated by the Overseas Development Administration as intermediate customer, and therefore under-

We question the value of the Rayner scrutinies to the Minister." Even then, in the case of pest control and tropical products, "the decisions taken do not seem to be warranted by the conclusions of the scrutinies . . a view with which the examining officer concurred."

Two new orthodoxies underlay the cuts and changes the select committee has commented on private is good, public is bad, when there is a choice; and cost-cutting equals efficiency. These are useful and powerful tools with which to set about bureaucracy. But they are not the only tools in the box or always the most appropriate. It is evident from the select committee's examination of this small but not unimportant part of the apparatus that the tools can be mishandled.

Birth of a Nation (Central) might have chosen a more appropriate title from the world of silent films: Greed, perhaps, Or even Modern Times, since it was set io a comprehensive school which made Wormwood Scrubs seem like an old people's home. When its headmaster began explaining how "In many ways, this school is like the nation the odds were heavily on the side of allegory and there was an uneasy feeling that we were about to be told something for our own good. Since the school io question was hell on earth, consisting of a moh of loutish and disagreeable teenagers, the prognosis would be a gloomy one; nm so much a nauco as a new client state, ready to turn upon those in authority who do not provide them with bread or circuses.

A new teacher, Mr Figg, has entered the school with enlightened ideas about pupil participation and the iniquities of corporal punishment. "Sit back", he tells his form. "Do nothing. Just talk." They had ninhing to say, of course, "Self-expression" is the cliché on such occasions hut, with those who have oo "self" to speak of, it is a thing to be avoided at all costs. I do not suppose that this was the impression which the script writer, David Leland, wished to give. He was clearly oo the side of the angels, since he adopted a most sympathetic attitude towards those teachers who wanted to fight "the system" (the system in this case being the cooventional one of instruction and examination). The sentimentality of such an attitude was certainly at odds with the immediacy and horror of some of the scenes. Birth of a Nation relied extensively upon the coovenuous of television realism, close in tooe to recent documentaries like Kingswood, but that is not to say that it was realistic, It depended upon a number of vaguely related scenes which were designed to give a cumulative impression of chaos and conflict and, as a result, the end veered towards melodrama as a crowd of unemployed school leavers invaded the school with bottles. and flame. It was, not at all conviocing - so obvious a denouement that the "point" was rammed home with a pile driver. This was a drama which conflated rhetoric and realism and provided a 'most uneasy' substitute for both:

Glyndebourne's revival of Strauss's domestic comedy can be summed up in two words: Felicity Lott. The opera is ooc that depends totally oo the interpretation of the composer's wife Christine Storch, who is on stage singing of her pleasures and frustrations for most of the time. Miss Lott takes the role wholly to herself. As an acting performance it is closely and sensitively detailed; as a vocal impersonation it is complete.

Rameau's magical invention

Les Fêtes de Polymnie

Banqueting House, Whitehall

The English Bach Festival has dooe wooders in renewing Rameau's reputation, but oot even the example suggested by Rubens's Allegory of Triumph oo the ceiling of this attractive venue coold iospire the performers of a semi-staged collection of extracts from the Prologue and first entrée of Les Fêtes de Polymnie to Olympian achievements. Yet the music is its usual magical self, another revelation of an astonishing inventiveness, from the slowly-built dissonant and colourfully orchestrated chords of the Prelude to the most commonplace dance forms, which in the case of one Minuet suggested

David Roblou directed an ensemble which was tucked into one corner of the performing area. The vast chasm thus created between him and the choristers precluded absolute unanimity of ensemble in, for example, the "Hymne au Destin", and the few crises of intonation on the part of the English Bach Festival Singers and Barmone Ensemble made themselves more promusent because of the small minuters involved.

Peter Ackroyd Neither did the solo singers quite measure up to the demands made upoo them, although to be fair two of them, Janis Kelly and Fiona Cameron, were standing in for the indisposed Jacquelyn Fugelle. Miss Kelly has been trained for Wagnerian goddess roles, not baroque oymphs. As Hêbê she fairly devastated Rameau's elegant rhythms with her blockbusting assault. Miss Cameron, who earlier sang "Endless Pleasure" in a sequence of pieces from Handel's Semele, was much lighter and flexible as Polympie, while Christine Brunning's Mnémosine had a welcome fruitiness and Mark Tucker, as the Chef des Arts and Alcide socoded thin-voiced and strained in the upper register. But the most disappointing was the long awaited Jupiter (Stephen Holloway), who looked imposing enough but sang with an ugly sound and was often painfully flat.

By concentrating on music from the divertissements the EBF fortuitously gave their Baroque Dancers the chance to show a real awareness of the style. Their delicate gestures and formations, occasionally interrupted by a swift dart across the floor, brought to Rameau's elegant ceremony a kinetic life which itself made this enterthise peculiarly sevealing.

The music is tolerably well played at the Coliseum under Graham Bood's direction. Wendy Eathorne's singing would probably carry better if she were oot confined to the orchestra pit. Choreography and dancing are pleasant enough, too, but uoremarkahle.

To the first song, Virginie Alberti (a dancer new to me) is prettily lifted about by Christopher Carney. Janette Mulligan strikes nice clean arabesques when not being turned by two partners in the secood. Mary McKendry next keeps slipping through Jeremy Coles's arms and looking anguished, uotil the other men carry her away. Meanwhile, a gauze curtain above the stage changes height, colour and shape. The four plays of Eduardo de Filippo already seen in London. ought to have familiarized us with his view of Neapolitan family life, but with this piece we have to start again from

The date is 1948, a time (as I remember from my soldier father's appalled letters from Naples) when the Italian genius for improvising means of survival almost went overboard into crowd ferocity. Food was short, but grudges and vendettas were abundant; and the Neapolitans as de Filippo depicts them here are well on the way to turning intn packs of Inner Voices, like his other work, is a comedy, but unly just, and only by technical devices. It opens with what seems a typical family scene with Aunt Rosa preparing breakfast for the Cimmaruta family, and (as in Filumena) chatting away about dreams. But they are dreams of fountains gushing blood, or sitting down to eat a roasted child. Everyone has trouble with sleep. One by nne we meet the rest of the troubled household: the perpetually eoraged hus-band Pasquale and his defiant wife who keeps the family afloat by telling fortunes. A parasite ocighbour, Carlo, drops io and devours all the food within reach while passing malicious comments on Rosa's access to eggs and other rare delicacies.

Ralph Richardson then arrives as Carlo's brother Alberto: a mild, affable old party whose eccentric suggesuons for rearranging the kitchen furniture turn out to be a means of detaining the family until the police arrive to arrest them for murdering a neighbour.

The inquiry into this supposed crime occupies the rest of the play, and acts as a moral iodex for every character on stage. The main point that emerges is that, whether or not there is a corpse in the background, the family are perfectly prepared to commit murder to escape further investigation.

The plot proceeds by a series of reversals of sympathy. When searches fail to reveal a corpse, Alfredo (another bad sleeper) admits that he may have simply dreamed the murder. But no sooner have you got him marked down as a vicious. informer than the tide of way to the palatial junk-packed hovel he shares with Carlo and

One element that saves Mike Ockrent's productioo from this fate is the elegantly phrased. unobtrusively witty translation hy N. F. Simpson, whom it is a pleasure to welcome back to the English stage.

The other mainstay is the presiding comic atmosphere of Alfredo's household. Left to themselves, the Cimmarutas are not comic characters. The brutal son, tight-lipped aunt (Avril Elgar) and, most of all, the warring marital partnership of Marjorie Yates and Robert Stephens rebounding between humiliation and hysterical jealousy, are figures poised oo the brink of lurid violence.

Inside Alfredo's domain. however, it is averted. Richardson, always several mental steps ahead of the surrounding company, deflects and defuses the sense of danger with behrused detachment, turning even the likelihood of being beaten up inlo a delicious comic routine.

Court of Appeal Law Report June 20 1983 No abandonment of planning permission

Pioneer Aggregates (UK) Ltd v Secretary of State for the Environment and Others Before Lord Justice Eveleigh, Lord Justice O'Connor and Sir David [Judgment delivered June 15] The Court of Appeal was bound, Slough Estates Ltd v Slough arough Council (No 2) ([1969] 2 Ch 305) to hold that, where a man was entitled to one of two inconsistent rights, then if he, with full knowledge, did an unequivocal act showing that he had chosen the one, he could not afterwards pursue the other (per Lord Denning, Master of the Rolls, at p 318). Lord Justice Eveleigh and Sir David Cairns expressed the view that there was no wider principle of abandonment applicable to planning permission.

The court dismissed an appeal by the Peak Park Joint Planning Board from Mr Justice Glidewell who in February 1982 held that a right to quarry minerals from Hartshead Quarry in the Peak District National Park had not been

It was clear that "abandonment" had not been used in that case in any technical sense. It had simply been an alternative way of speaking in election. The court was also bound by Slough Estates to accept that in the kind of election there referred to intention did not matter, although innention did not matter, although his Lordship had found some difficulty in accepting the proposition as firmly as Lord Denning.

Looking at the present case, his Lordship could find no two inconsistent rights possessed by Pioneer's predecessors.

Mr Barnes had sought to say that they had had two rights to continue mining or to cease the cessation in be treated as completion and then negotiate more favourable terms for the restoration of the site. They had ected to do the seco

His Lordship did not regard that as election between two rights. There had been, if one talked of rights in that connexion, only one right to choose; and it was artificial to say that a men who had an option had two rights: one to accept, one to decline. Those sprang from the same right. His Lordship agreed with Mr Justice Gildewell that, on the basis of the Slough approach, there was no room for the application of that

It was, therefore, unnecessary to it was, therefore, innecessary is decide whether or not there was some wider principle of abandonment. Mr Barnes had submitted that, while he could not produce was, were no count for production of the productions in a way that suggested a broad concept and as one that applied in other fields, for example, which there was no pements, which there was no spon should not apply in the case a planting application.

His Lineiship would approach the matter on the principle that one couple not to add to the provisions of the legislature towards a certain end — in this case, the extragulature to planning permission — when there planning permission — when there planning permission — when there were so be found in the Town and Country Planning Act. 1971, provisions for that purpose and when no need for any further provision to do so would run counter to the provisions of the 1971 Act: see section 33 (1):

He would be guided by what Lord Fraser of Tullybelton and Lord Scarman had said in Newbury District Council v Secretary of State for the Environment ([1981] AC 578):

"I am of opinion that the principle contended for is unsound. It would introduce an estoppel or bar, personal to the particular party, which is quite inappropriate in this field of law, which is concerned with rights that run with land. To do so bar, personal to the particula would lead to uncertainty and confusion. It would also interfere with the convenient practice whereby prospective vendors or purchasers of land apply for planning permission as a precaution f there is doubt about whether their proposals are already permissible or (per Lord Fraser, at p 606).

"In the field of property law, equity is a potent protection of private rights, operating upon the ence of those who have notice of their existence. But this is no reason for extending it into the public law of planning control, which binds everyone. . . .

"I agree with the view so consistently expressed by Lord. Parker, Lord Chief Justice, that it is Parker, Lord Chief Justice, that it is wrong to introduce into public administrative law concepts such as equitable estoppel which are essentially aids to the doing of justice in private law . . . if and in so far as [authorities relied on by Lord Denning] suggest (and I dn not think that they do) that equitable estoppel has a place in the law of planning control, they are incorrect in law and should not be followed" (per Lord Scarman, at no 616.617). Without prejudice to the provisions of this Act as in the duration, revocation or modifi-cation of planning permission, any grant of planning permission to develop land shall (except in so far as the permission otherwise pro-vides) enure for the benefit of the land and of all persons for the time

That was not a purely personal right; it was one that affected the character of the land itself, and when one bore in mind that more than one person could have an interest in the land and at the same interest in the land and at the same of one or successively an interest in preserving a use, it would become imworkable if one were to allow a wide principle of abandonment to be imposted into planning law. Mr Widdicombe had submitted that Slough Estates had been reversited by Newbury because it was inconsistent with it, or alternatively had been overruled by it by implication. His Lordship was not persuaded of that.

Lord Justice O'Connor delivered

SIR DAVID CAIRNS, also concurring, said that no case directly supported the view that it was possible for there to be an abandonment of planning permission quite apart from election. Nur did one find indirect support for that in any case. In principle, his Lordship could see no reason for supposing that there was any such wide principle of abandonment in relation to planning permission. Solicitors: Theodore Goddard & Co for Mr C. J. Mr Justice Woolf so held in the Queen's Bench Division consider-ing a claim by South Tottenham Land Securities Ltd (the landford) against R. & A. Millett (Shops) Ltd (the tenant) and Alan Cyril Millett (the guarantor) for arrears of rent. The landlord acquired the reversion of a 99-year lease granted to the tenant in 1959. The tenant had since assigned his interest in third parties. Clause I provided for a specified yearly rent to be paid until March 25, 1980, and thereafter until March 25, 2001, in the absence of agreement between the landlord and the tenant, an amount determined by an arbitrator on the landlord's application before March 25, 1980, to be paid by equal quarterly payments on March 25, June 24, September 29 and Clause 2 provided for payment of rent at the time and "in the manner. . . aforesaid". Clause 4(1) provided a right of reentry in the event of rent being in arrears for 21 days.

December 25 in every year.

On June 6, 1980, an arbitrator was appointed to fix a revised rent and on October 30, 1980, be notified the landlord and the third parties that be had made and published his award. After taking up the award, the landlord wrote to the third parties' solicitors informing award. On November 26. ani having received the increased rent due under the award for the quarters ending June 24 and September 29 1980, the landlords forfeited the

The defendants denied liability, alleged wrongful forfeiture and claimed an idemnity from the third Mr. Robin Belben for the landlord; Mr Romie Tager for the tensor; the third parties did not appear and were oot represented MR JUSTICE WOOLF said that it was submitted that none of the sums claimed were due when the landlord forlested because although the increased rent had been rmined by November 26, 1980 it was not payable under the terms of the lease until the following quarter day, December 25.

arbitrator had determined the rent and the determination was binding on the tenant, the tenant was unde an obligation to make payment on the following quarter day. If he failed to do so, the landlord could forfeit the lease under clause 4(1) after 21 days.

In the present case the landlord purported in forfeit before the quarter day following the determination and the forfeiture was wrongful. . Counsel for the tenant further rent became payable before the quarter day, the tenant was not obliged to make payment until he knew the coatents of the award on It was not sufficient for the purpose of imposing an obligation co a tenant to pay an increased rent that an arbitrator had determined the real without informing the tenant of that fact. But, as in other commercial arbitrations, the award was published when the parties informed that an award had been made, whether or not they had notice of the contents of the award.

So that notice was given to the tenant on October 30, 1980. The present case underlined the desirability for those drawing up such review clauses of making clear when rent, determined after it would otherwise have become due rent, determined after n was payable.

Having concluded that the landlord had acted precipitately in forfering the lease, it was agreed that the matter be remitted to the master for the assessment of

Curiously, to end the Loodon Sinfonietta's "Vienna: reaction aod revolution" series there were two works neither uf which is particularly reactionary or revolutiooary. Schoenberg's Serenade, Op 24, looks hack directly to Mozart, not only because of its divertimeoto-like seven-movement plan but largely through its aesthetic.

Which is not to say that it is a slight work, any more than some of Mozart's Divertimentos are. Rather the easy sounds it makes (easy, that is, for the sympathetic ear) cunningly disguise the subtlest emotions. And if in the March and Dance Scene" are to be found Mahlerian echoes, the burlesque is several degrees less sinister, and the language, for all the dense counterpoint, is much clearer, helped by the instrumentation of string trio, clarinet and bass clarinet, guitar and mandolin.

Unravelling the busy textures Sinfonietta's exquisite performance, under David Atherton, in which precision went hand in hand with natural feeling for phrase and motion. The central setting of Petrarch epitomized the flavour of the whole, with David Wilson-Johnson achieving just the right balance between reserve and passion. In Berg's Chamber Concerto Sinfonietta/Atherton the players, encouraged by Mr work, added stamina to their long list of attributes. This is a work that requires virtuosity of a kind more closely related to the niocteenth ceotury, with a flavour derived more from Brahms that anything else. It is thematically intense, it spreads itself on the broadest of canvases, and its technical demands are quite merciless. And yet it still shows deference to classical antecedeots. Paul Crossley and Gyorgy Pauk, the solo pianist and vinlinist, launched themselves into the Concerto's lavish fluurishes of drama and seotiment with imperious command and ripe seositivity. Their performance served as an apt reminder that Berg (and Brahms) were unrepentant Romanucs, and that art progresses chiefly through evolutionary, nnt revolutionary,

Allied Supplies must have looked very much a second choice to Mr Jimmy Gulliver when his Argyll Foods bought it from Sir James Goldsmith's Generale Occidentale after Argyli's bid for Linfood failed. Mr Gulliver badly wanted to add Lipfood to his empire but was stopped by an unexpected referral to the Monopolies Commission.

Money markets keep guessing

The financial markets concluded last week on a nervous tote, with the behaviour of both the British, and the American monetary authorities in some doubt. On this side of the Atlantic the markets are wondering whether the Government will give higher priority to a lower value for sterling and the avoidance of a mortgage rate rise than to above-target money growth and government borrowing.

On the other side they are guessing which measure of money Mr Paul Volcker, the reappointed chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, will be Brazil's disconcerting reappearance on the international financial scene with begging bowl outstretched is a salutary reminder that the global debt problem will be with ns for some time to come. Just bow long is made only too clear in a new analysis by Morgan Guaranty, the American bank.

Challenge of the decade

The bank believes that even on the most favourable assumptions - sustained growth in the West, resolute corrective action by debt-pressed countries. maintenance of financial flows from the world banking system - the problems of the big debtors will take the rest of the decade to resolve.

It follows that those who put their faith in tough austerity programmes by debtor nations are being dangerously short-sighted. Such policies would have to be pursued for years - at enormous and probably matenable social and political costs - to make any significant dent in the Writing off debt would not belp either. It would risk choking off new funds altogether by eroding banks' capital base.

So the answer must be a long-term strategy which recognizes that the cure will be slow to take effect; encouragement of steady growth in the West, adjustment by debtor countries to reduce borrowing needs, incentives for banks to go on lending, and more official aid and private direct investment to replace bank credits.

World leaders began to grope towards such strategy at Williamsburg; but fine words need to be translated into a detailed agenda for action before the shadow of global financial collapse can leave the stage.

invention, removes the performance of the manufacturing supplier from any line of credit

In brief, it insures a leading British finance house in a deal with a big foreign bank - with a set amount of money available for several deals to be done.

Fincobes leap-frog the pre-vious obstacle, which demanded examination of individual contracts, perhaps worth £50,000 or £100,000 apiece, by the ECGD. It also avoids long delays which arose when there was a dispute over whether the British supplier had performed before the ECGD could even entertain a claim.

From the ECGD's point of view, the fincobes are a blessing its staff at Cardiff no longer spend hours on small individual contracts. From the exporters' point of view it is good because they get paid right away.

The risk is not great for

NOTICE OF REDEMPTION

Borden Overseas Capital Corporation N.V. 634% Convertible Guaranteed Depentures Due 1991

Redemption Date: July 13, 1983 Conversion Right Expires: July 13, 1983

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the holders of outstanding 64% Convertible Guaranteed Debentures Duc 1991 (the "Debentures") of Borden Overseas Capital Corporation N.V. (the "Company") that in accordance with the terms of the Indenture dated as of July 15, 1971 (the "Indenture") among the Company, Borden, Inc., as Guarantor (the "Guarantor"), and Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, as Trustee, the Company has elected to redeem all of the outstanding Debentures on July 13, 1983 (the "Redemption Date") at a redemption price of 101% of the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest from July 15, 1982 to July 13, 1983, Payment of the redemption price and accrued interest, which will aggregate $1,077.13 for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures (the "Redemption Price"), will be made upon presentation and surrender of Debentures, together with the July 15, 1983 and all subsequent interest coupons attached at the option of the holder either (a) at Citibank, N.A. Receive and Deliver Department, 111 Wall Street, 5th Floor, New York, New York 10043, or (b) subject to any laws or regulations applicable thereto in the country of any such office, at the offices of the additional Paying and Conversion Agents set forth below.

On the Redemption Date the Redemption Price will become due and payable upon each Debenture. No interest will accrue on the Debentures on and after July 13, 1983.

CONVERSION OR SALE ALTERNATIVES

Debenturcholders have, as alternatives to redemption, the right to sell their Debentures through usual brokerage facilities or, on or before the close of business on July 13, 1983 to convert such Debentures into Common Stock of the Guarantor. The right to convert the principal of the Debentures to be redeemed will terminate at the close of business on July 13, 1983.

The Debentures are presently convertible into Common Stock of the Guarantor at the price of $28.75 per share, resulting in a conversion rate of approximately 34.78 shares of Common Stock per $1,000 in principal amount of the Debentures. The Guarantor will pay a cash adjustment in United States dollars in lieu of fractional shares in accordance with Section 3.03 of the Indenture.

So long as the market price of the Common Stock exceeds $30.97 per share, the market value of the shares of Common Stock into which the Debentures are convertible is greater than the Redemption Price. On May 31, 1983, the closing price of the Guarantor's Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange as reported by the Western Edition of the June 1, 1983 Wall Street Journal was $35.75 per share.

To convert Debentures to Common Stock, the Debentures, with the July 15, 1983 and all subsequent interest coupons attached, together with written notice of election executed by the holder that the holder elects to convert such Debenture, and specifying the name or names in which the shares of stock deliverable upon conversion shall be registered, with the address(es) of the person(s) so named, must be delivered to either (a) the New York office of Chibank, N.A., mentioned in the first paragraph of this notice, or (b) subject to any laws or regulations applicable thereto in the country of any such office, to the offices of the additional Conversion Agents set forth below.

However, during the same period, assets have mushroomed to just under £5m. Its mainly as a result of the group's policy of ploughing profits back that the group's has achieved its record earnings level. Mr Turrico Parrett, chairman and managing director, says the chief aim of the directors is to use the group's resources for further expansion, including the acquisition of commercial sites.

The success of this policy will determine dividend payments.

Experts await Fed move on M1 growth

The financial markets will reopen today with two significant pieces of news to digest --the reappointment of Mr Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve and the $5.6ba (£3,733m) rise in money MI which was annonnced on Friday.

Mr David Hale, chief economist for Kemper Financial Services in Chicago, issued an alert on Friday stating: "sell bonds on Voick-

The financial markets further late on Friday on the news of the huge rise in M1. After the money news. federal funds were offered at 91/4 per cent, compared with the 83/4 of the last week or two. Three-month 8.76 per cent also op on recent levels. The treasury 10½ long bond closed at 96½ to yield 10.75 per cent. As compared with a price of 96 on

Mr Volcker's reappointment is a clear signal of the bankruptcy of the Reagan Administration's about major economic policy issues. There is no clear leader in economic policy and no original ideas.

Repoblicans are bound to be amazed that their party could find no Republican suitable to ssume the task of chairman of the central banks. Instead, the president stuck with Mr Volcker, who was appointed by President Carter and whose policies were responsible for the losses suffered by the Republican Party in 1982. Mr David Hale's suggestion to sell bonds on Volker's reappointment is based on the idea that with this big issue out of the way and with economic recovery proceeding so strongly, the central bank will finally take steps to hold down the growth of money.

One, such unavoidable step would be to release the federal funds rate from the weight of the central bank that has been holding it down.

The fonds rate, which has been stuck around 8 % 8 % per cent since December, would then rise to about 10 per cent, taking many other short-term rates with it.

Such action is being forced on to the central bank by the failure of real interest rates to decline, by the continuing strength of the dollar and by weakness of gold and commodities prices.

These developments indi-cate that the financial markets are sceptical about the policies of the Federal Reserve and in particular about the speed of money growth.

Not that last week's rise in ney MI was unexpected. Citibank's economists had been forecasting three weeks ago that M1 would rise by about £6bn in the first two weeks of June. On Jane 10 it was announced that M1 rose by only £100m. The subent $5.6bn rise announced on Friday thus got the Citibank forecast back on track for the first two weeks as Citibank expects that it will be announced on Friday that M1 has fallen $1ba - $2bn. To give ao overall result for June of M1 rising at an annual rate of about 10 per cent. This is considerable improvement no the 26 per cent annual rate of increase of M1 in May, but still above the Federal Reserve's own target band for MI growth.

In the immediate future, therefore, it is to be expected ioterest rates will rise somewhat on the short end, the dollar will continue very strong and gold and commodities (and bonds) will remain denressed.

However, if Mr Volcker does turn to reduce the rate of money growth, as he must if a 1984-85 recession is to be avoided, then within a month or two I would expect all interest rates to start drifting down again, as the financial markets regain a modicum of confidence in the policies and practices of the Federal Re-

Their run rates are shown in the table below and they will be dicisive should Australia and Pakistan win. Australia's rate is superior to India's and Pakistan's to New Zealand's.

The raeson wby Pakistan and Australia are certain to go through if they win is that rules of the competition are such that, for the sake of calculating the run rate, a team which is bowled out within its 60 overs is deemed to have received the full 60 overs.

Thus, even if a side weot hell for leather and scored, say, 300 runs off 40 overs, but lost all its N wickets in the process, it would Pakistan gain oo advantage if its Sri Lanka opponents took the full 60 overs to score 301. If you comprehend that without the benefit of a mathematical degree, full marks.

OLD TRAFFORD: England (4pts) beat Pakistan by seven wickets

Saturday at Old Trafford was one of those days, almost enique this summer, when the air smelled of runs as well as heat. That the runs did oot materialize after Pakistan had chosen to bat was due to an Engaind, who bowled straight and to a length and fielded udily. If New Zealand had beaten Sri Lanka, as one would have expected, and if Pakistan had built up the kind of total that makes the stoutest of sides hatting second quail. England could have been in trouble.

For this to have happened, Pakistan needed a sound start with runs from any two of Zaheer, Miandad and Imran. They were proceeding fluently enough towards this when Dilley, in an admirable opening spell, sent back Mudassar and Zaheer within the space of two

Gould got quickly across to a late glance from Mudassar and Zaheer got the faintest of touches to a ball that left him just enough on the off stump. Gould, behind the wicket, is an odd performer. Watching his shapeless figure plodding between overs you expect to see bits of straw surpirisingly fast io movement. If one could accuse him of having sensitive hands, the more testing the catch the more likely is it to stick.

Mohsin Khan, without ever looking the batsman who took 200 off England at Lord's a year ago, was batting pleasantly enough when he flicked Allott off his toes and Marks took a magnificent diviog catch at square leg.
Miandad, who had giveo Mohsin

75 mioutes start and then over-hauled him io three balls at the expense of Allott, was looking at his most beligereot. A score around 300 seemed on the cards, with Imran settling in and Marks posing few problems on a beautiful batting wicker. But the accuracy of the quicker bowlers and Marks's deceptive flight had kept Pakistan to three an over with half their overs bowled. It was in the effort to make haste against Marks that first Inran, then Wasim Raja, tried to clear deep mid-off and failed.

That left only Miandad as a serious threat Botham, the tamest and most expensive of the England bowlers, now took a hand, swooping on the ball at deep gully and throwing the middle stump out with Miandad a yard short. Several times more Botham threw the wicket

But the pitch was a real "belter". But the pitch was a real "belter", the Tavern boundary was short and Australia were without Lawson, these days the best of their fast bowlers. Once Haynes and Green-idge had given West Indies a safe start with 79 in 18 overs the rest was more or less inevitable. Derby: Sri Lanka (4pts) beat New Zealand by three wickets. Zealand captain, Geoff Howarth, confided that he was desperately keen wio the toss. On Saturday evening while conceding that in Dias and Kuruppu with the bat, de Mel and de Silva with the ball, Sri Lanka had four outstanding iodivid-ual performances, he still felt that factor io his team's defeat. It was easy to understand Howarth's point of view. In the morning, under cloud cover on a pitch which has new found life this season, the ball swuog and scamed.

At lunch, New Zealand were 92 for six, and three more wickers fell shortly afterwards to de Mcl, whose fioal return of five for 32 was a Prudential World Cup record for his country.

By mid-afternoon it was a different story. The County Ground at Derby is ofteo regarded as one of the bleaker venues but with a much the bicaker venues but with a fruch larger crowd than usual basking in the suo, and the dragons adoring the flags held by chanting Sri Lankan supporters waving happily, it was almost one of those idyllic summer scenes to which bowlers toil and the statement thrive. The first to do so batsmen thrive. The first to do so were New Zealand's Snedden and Chatfield, whose stand of 65 was the second highest tenth wicket partnership to the competition history.

That at least gave them something to bowl at, but the ease was disturbing from a New Zealand viewpoint, and the fears were confirmed by Dias early io his innings wheo be drove Snedder imperiously on the up, an unim-aginable shot earlier in the day. A partnership of 80 with Kuruppu put Sri Lanka well on the way to partnership of 80 with Kuruppu put Sri Lanka well on the way to victory, but the subsequent loss of five wickets for 32 ruos, which set up a dramatic ending, if it owed something to fragile nerves it also suggested that the pitch was still giving the bowlers some assistance, which did little for Howarth's hypothesis

It all made for a good game of cricket, but whether it was all good cricket is another matter, the loss of the toss was little excuse for some of the batting which followed.

But while the sight of a very good leg spinner bowing with three meo in close catching positions to a one-day game is delightful, whether even the disastrous start justified allowing de Silva to bowl nine overs for six runs before lunch, is a question cause some soul searching,

Parker's aim puts paid to Lancashire

By Simon O'Hegan

HORSHAM: Sussex (4pts) beat ancasnire by two runs

When the weather and the setting are as lovely as they were at Horsham yesterday, if is perhaps too much to expect an enthralling crieket match as well. Yet, when Barelay, the Sussex captain, began the last over with Laneashire needing 13 to win with two wiekets standing, an appreciative crowd knew they had more to remember from the day than merely having From the first ball Fairbrother scored two runs, from the second four and from the third two. Five were now needed from three balls, but Fairbrother made a fatal misjudgment when going off a second run off the fourth ball of the over, Parker running him out. From the fifth ball Folley compounded that error with a similar one, leaving Sussex fraught winners by two runs.

Abrahums. the Lancashire cap-tain, who finished 70 not out, was a helpless witoess to all this, sadly so for he had been the player chiefly responsible for his side's coming so elose to victory. Coming to the wieker at 58 for four he had driven and cut with panache until the steady departure of his partners forced him into a more cautious

At the crucial stage of the innings, as le Roux and Pigott were getting to grips with the Lancashire middle order, he received hardly any of the strike. His final contribution. however, was memorable, a six off the final ball of the penultimate over to leave his side with a glimmer of

The irony is, however, that Sussex's total had looked inad-equate; not the least of the Horsham ground's attractions is its compactness and we were fully expending an afternooo with fours and sixes in abundance. Instead Sussex provided

HANDBALL: BRITAIN'S TRUE-BLUE, TOTALLY COMMITTED LOSERS

Considering that they consistently lose to the Faroe Islands, a thinly-populated bunch of rocks to the north of Scotland. British bandballers are a buoyant lot.

Of course, handball is the national sport in the Faroes, presumembly because there is not presumming because there is not much else to do during those long, winter nights. It is most certainly not the British national sport, but it is nevertheless alive and well within these islands.

Its players are the sort who do out sponorship, give total mitment on court and actually

Watson v Ballesteros was a crowd-puller of such dimensions that the attendance for the day, 38,046, surpassed the previous record for a single day of the United States Open by more than 4,000. They will hardly feel that they got less than value for money. Ballesteros was the first to strike, negatively if you will, by getting a four at the 469-yard first, a hole that had stolen a stroko from him oo the first two days. This time, perservering with his one-iroo off the tee, he still missed the green with his second, but contrived to get up and down from the rough. The trickling putt from 20 feet gave him his first birdie at feet gave him his first birdie at the third, and two woods reached the fourth green (561 yards). Watson emulated that colossal achievement, almost to the same blade of grass on the green. Thereafter, it was hammer-and-tongs all the way, with

Moorhouse | Porsche's first eight places at Le Mans

From John Blunsden, Le Mans

The final act in n formidable the leaders also lost time with a demonstration of Porsche superiority was performed here nt 4.0 yesterday afternoon when the American driver, Al Holbert, crossed the finishing line with his Porsche 956 to win the 24 hours of the Mans shead of oo fewer than seven similar cars. With a fellow American, Hurley and the Australian long distance specialist. Vern Schuppan, sharing the winning car, and with Mario Andretti and his soo, Michael, finishiog third, it was a considerable success story for

In the end it was a close-run thing. Steam was pouring from the leading car as Holbert started the 370th and fioal lap of the 8.4-mile circuit and Britain's Derek Bell was closing in fast in the second of the surviving 956s of the Rodimans Porsches of the works team. But the overheating engine survived the ordeal and 64.3sec still separated the ordeal and 64.3sec still separated the two cars at the finish, with the Aodrettis, who drove with the Frenchman, Philippe Alliot, a further six laps to arrears.

The attempt by Bell and his regular Belgian co-driver, Jacky leks, to complete a personal treble of Le Mans wins was in be thwarted three times. The first was when lekx was knocked into a spin oo the Mulsamme straight and both cars had to head for the pits for body repairs.

By 7.0 oo Sunday morning Ickx and Bell had just fought their way to the front when, with Bell at the wheel, their engine cut out on the Mulsamme straight. Bell radioed for instructions, was told to change the ignition control box (a spare was carried to the car) and within six laps he had the car mobile again.

Then, in mid-morning, with the gap down to three laps, an oil leak delayed the car further and although suspension damage, and later had to replace a cockpit door which flew off at 200 mph, they still had sufficient time to hand for a narrow vicctory. Jochco Mass, Stefan Bellof and

From a Special Correspondent Singapore

England and New Zealand play each other today in the last of their Group A matches at the sixth world netball tournament in Singapore. Both teams are undefeated and, whatever the result, will qualify for the final round-robin. They will be mined by Australia and Trinidad from Group B, where Australia beat Trinidad on Saturday 57-25.
England rarely perform well against New Zealand but, judged by their display of skills and taches last week and their undoubted fitness, they probably have the edge. They play their three matches in the final round on Toesday, Wednesday and Priday.

Lions must ponder lessons of defeat to regain their pride

New Zealand British Lions..

The British Lions must now sift through the ashes of their 9-0 defeat by the rampaging All Blacks forwards in the second windswept international on Saturday and try to international on Saturday and my to salvage enough of their spirit and teamwork to sustain them through the remaining four weeks and two internationals of the tour. They will be lucky if they find enough solid and usable material to restore them to the confidence with which they

to the confidence with which they approached Saturday's game.

The All Blacks forwards and David Loveridge, their brilliant scrum half, not only destroyed a Lions team which might have expected to sail down wing to victory, they also demoralized the Liona for they demolished them where they thought they were strongest – at scrum, lineout, loose and half back.

It will take much hard talking, and harder work, before the Lions pack recovers from that mauling. With the threat that the All Blacks will probably strike just as violently will probably strike just as violently and just as often in the third and fourth internationals the Lions must now refashion their tactical think-now refashion their tactical thinking, and, perhaps, look to other scoring options removed from their pack and Ollie Camphell's boot.

It was one of the astonishing feats of recent rugby that the All Blacks played upwind with such ferocity and control that they were only twice penalized, and both times far outside Campbell's range. So the man who has broken so maoy rugby hearts had only one kick at goal in penalty attempt in the same half bot aspect of the match, Roy Laidlaw was swamped by the black tide.

It will not help the Lions to rediscover their buoyant spirit when they realize they had the match in their grasp when they had only conceded a quicksilver try to Loveridge, and a conversion and penalty goal to Allan Hewson in the first half after Andy Dalton, the All Blacks captain, had tempted fate by taking first use of the wiod after he had won the toss.

The first half jerked along and the All Blacks never really looked like getting the 15 or 16 points which Dahon's gamble demanded. They made oomerous handling errors. They were not in harmony with Francis Palmade, the French referee, who caoed them with 10 penalties to four.

So the All Blacks, while safe from Campbell's merciless boot, were seldom able to build up the consistent pressure which would have brought the tries and goal kicks in sustain them upwind to the second half. At half-time Dalton demanded a renewed effort from his men. He knew he did not have enough poiots and he told them that if they won, it would rank as one of the great wins against the odds. How oobly, how brilliantly, the All Blacks rose to their captain, who had one of his finest games as an All Black. The All Blacks scrum became utterly reliable. The lineout, aided quite often by Ciaram Fitzgerald's long throws, which drifted in the wind to the All Blacks side, gave

The Lions were knocked over by one of the finest combined All times and constantly taunted by Loveridge at his peak. Dalton ha certainly never played better, Jock Hobbs dominated the scramble for the loose ball, and the rest of this marvellous band smasked onward.

Towards the end of the Lions tried to run their back line, but the All Blacks defence was tenacious. The Lions now know it will take a superhuman effort merely to draw the series. Ahead of them they have of Islands before their next match

There they must worry and

From Athole Still Rome The eight members of the England squad, sponsored by Yorkshire, Bank, can feel well pleased with their efforts over the past three days at the Seven Hills meeting in Rome. They won two gold medals, two silver and six hronze, and although the uncom-monly cold, wet and blustery conditions were against good times, particularly as there were too many chill-inducing false starts, there were indeniably optimistic portents of

A borse trained in the British Isles A bosse trained in the British Isles will be trying to win the Grand Prix de Lyon for the second consecutive year when the David O'Brientrained Karol lines up for the 11-furlong race this evening, Desmond Stoneham writes. A year ago Pat Eddery won on Six Mile Bottom, who carried the famous Moller colours to victory.

who carried the famous Moller colours to victory.
Christy Roche will be aboard Karol, whose lest race was in France when he ran sixth to Diamond Shoat in the Grand Prix d'Evry. Karol should reach a place, but the £18,000 race will probably go to Major Satingo, who won an important Tierce handicap under top weight in April. Uo Etendard and Thebis are also sure to ran well.

Leisure, a new employment sector

People have much more free time nowadays, either through working ewer hours or through "enforced eisure" - unemployment.

National and local government have both been taking steps to improve leisure amenities over the last ten years. The sports councils were set up in 1965, followed by the Countryside Commission and the national tourist boards, and local councils have been encouraged to build sports and leisure centres. The oumber of large sports centres in England increased from 27 in 1972 to 461 in 1981, while the number of swimming pools doubled over the same period. The boom in building sports centres is now over, but money has been allocated for refurbishing swimming pools in the oext ten years. According to the Sports Council, people are tending to get more involved in active sport and are creating a demand out being satisfied in the public sector. Because local authority spending has been cut back, there has been a growth in the number of private clubs and centres catering for golf, sub-aqua, squash, tennis, riding and water sports. Amenities are not equally distributed throughout the country local authority provision varies and the unemployed cannot afford to join private clubs.

Even so, taking sports provision in the country as a whole, growth has By Beryl Dixon been such that a Sports Council spokesman has declared: "Sport is a substantial new employment sector, which is not going to diminish in size but rather see a modest increase." Statistics kept by the various councils and authorities show that the oumber of people employed in sport and "other recreations" has risen by more than 75 per cent in the last 20 years to a total of 111,000.

"Other recreations" are largely those provided by the private sector and as well as sporting activities cover stately homes, wildlife parks, country parks, theme parks, open air museums and zoos. There are indications that Britain is going to have more of the American-style centres and theme parks where whole families can spend. a day enjoying a range of different activities. Using your languages

For many modern language graduates the ideal job is one which uses their languages from day one. Unfortunate ly such jobs are few and far between and linguists would be well advised to

Careers offering a primary use of language are more or less limited to translation, interpreting and language teaching. Both translation and interpreting are oversubscribed. Employers want experience and familiarity with specialized terminology, and according to one agency specializing in translation, the ideal applicant is a 56-year-old German-speaking chemical engineer. The picture is much the same for interpreters. While teaching is rarely the first choice of language graduates, it does offer career possibilities although because of spending cuts minority languages are less marketable than, say, French. The much mocked position of bi-lingual secretary still offers job openings which involve the frequent use of languages and can lead to better things.

Dismal as some of the prospects sound, there are many opportunities requiring a secondary use of languags, where the language is not in immediate daily use and may only be a small component of the job. The fundamental skills acquired during language courses, if not the language skills themselves, are transferable and can be put to daily use.

The big problem is in changing the attitude of the graduate, conditioned to thinking of a career in languages. It is hard for someone who has spent several years acquiring language skills to accept that employers are oot queuing up to offer them suitable But if a student can accept that it is not only the languages, but some of the intellectual disciplines that are enjoyable and that these skills have applications in other fields, then the horizons begin to expand, first the job seeker has to analyse what she or he wants and expects in a job; what kind of challenges, what skills the job seeker wishes to employ, and the type of working environment. It is at this point that the lonely life of the translator and the stressful, pressu-rized working conditions of the interpreter may become less

 As one would expect from the pen of Graham Reid, author of the excellent television plays, Too Late to Talk to Billy and A Question of Choice for Billy, THE HIDDEN CURRICULUM (Radio 4 7.45pm) is a powerful and at times sadiy comic work. The story concerns comic work. The sury concerns and idealistic English teacher in a secondary school in Belfast's Protestant area. Denys Hawthome brilliantly portrays the distilusioned teacher, Tony Calms, who, once safe in the works of Wilfred Owen. is forced to acknowledge the violence of the real world when he is visited by two of his former . . pupils. They, casually, inform him that another of his former charges is in prison for Sectarian killings and that they, too, had witnessed the execution of a youthful informer. If this were not enough to shake his confidence in his completent curriculum, his visit to the lailed boy's father finally convinces him that he has been living in another world. But it is the noises off as much as the dialogue that chills - none more so than at the climax of this drama.

A promising new comedy series begins tonight, THE HAPPY APPLE (ITV 8.00pm), the story of a struggling advertising company whose survival depends on the winning of a lucrative ice-cream account. Their lack of in-depth market research seems to be the stumbling block until, by chance, the three partners discover that their secretary is the perfect median. Keith Waterhouse has adapted the series from the play by Jack Pulman, with Leslie Ash delightful as the irreverent secretary, well supported by comedy stalwarts Nicky Henson, John Nettleton and Jeremy Child as the partners.

 Peter Davalle writes: PLAGUE
OF HEARTS (BBC1, 10.05pm), Dr
Michael O'Donnell'a series on coronary desease, grouns under the weight of terrifying statistics. None is more sobering than the fact that, during the 28 minutes the programme takes to watch, another 10 people will have died – not from fright (although this would be understandable, given the pictures of the ways in which we carry on abusing our bodies) but carry on accusing our poures; sur-mainly because, since our childhood, governments and medical authorities, trying to find ways to make us live longer, have consistently failed to get to the heart of the matter. heart of the matter.

Pope's address becomes Solidarity jamboree

From Roger Boyes

The Pope has not proposed any political escape route for the Polish people; but the ragamuffin army of a million young pilgrims was undeterred at the weekend. Skilled as ever in converting any large gathering into a solidarity jam-

From the weather-worn battle-Continued from page 1 and the leaders and the led, he ment of Czestechowa's Jasna Gora to happen on Wednesday or has also made clear that the monastery, the Pope's baritone hursday, probably in Cracow. dialogue must be rooted in echoed over and into the heads of a The Pope, bowever has been moral integrity if it is to achieve generation embittered by the loss generation embittered by the loss of a trade union that expressed many of their hopes and ambitions. "We do want - we do not want - a Poland - a Poland - that costs us nothing - that costs us nothing". came the voice, duplicated by the loudspeakers.

Dozens of Solidarity banners sprouted in the crowd in response to certain trigger words - workers, two mentions of solidarity with a small S, any reference to truth or oppression or human rights.

A hawk-eyed government agent could have unravelled most of the country's underground opposition simply by pinpointing the banners: Ursus (tractor factory) Solidarity Greets the Pope, Warsaw Polytechnic Solidarity Is With You.

But a million people shoe-horned into the meadow surrounding the ancient monastery defeats even the most vigilant secret service man - indeed defeated some of the ambulances trying to remove fainting girls - and the main concern was to prevent assassination attempts on the man in

It is difficult to know whether the Pope is giving the Polish people what they want. The huge applause - almost frightening when voiced by so many people in such a confined space - is a poor measure. Sometimes the young people - Scouts in long capes, students who have just finished their exams (who earned a special blessing from the Pope), farmers, shipyard workers, priests who looked as young as their charges -seemed to be applauding their own

"Mary, Mother of Christ and Queen of Poland", declared the Pope, "knows your sufferings, your difficult youth, your sense of injustice and humiliation, the lack prospects for the future ... perhaps the tempations to flee to some other world." That earnt the londest applause on Saturday night for it showed that the Pope understands both those who fought through the Solidarity era and those who have reached political materity since the union was banned by the Jaruzelski Govern-

The young Poles thus admire the Pope for his political as well as his spiritual integrity and they love him for being Polish. Whether that means they will accept his recipe for improving the Polish lot remains to be seen. The Pope gave a stern reminder to the young that the first step was to stop moral degeneration, not to give in to "social vices" - a reference to the increasing number of young Poles who have taken to drugs or who are becoming alcoholics or who are simply drifting.

The next step is dialogue. In earlier homilies and public addresses, the Pope declared his commitment to reviving the dia-logue between East and West (a new, more outgoing ostpolitik) and the dialogue between the leaders and the led in Poland. But in the Pope's view it must be a dialogue using not only similar words - as in his meeting with General Jaruzels ki - but respecting similar ideals and rights. That is more difficult as the government refusal to accept Mr Lech Waless as a talking partner demonstrates.

On Saturday night, the Pope's most immediate dilemma was how to hold a dialogue with a million people. When the Pope rose from his throne on the ramparts of the monastery, the crowd chanted in deafening unison "Long Live The Pope", making it impossible for him to speak. After a few minutes he said: "I would like to ask if a. man who comes to Poland from Rome has the right to speak. "Bardzo prosimy" - please go ahead - chanted the pilgrims.

The pilgrims, who came on bicycles, coaches, comandeered farm tractors, special trains and by foot also stayed the night, mainly, in tents and sleeping bags, gathered around camp fires and sung "God watch over Poland".

The Pope made one major omission to his prepared text delivered earlier in the day. In the prepared version he had spoken of anger in the hearts of Poles. While delivering the speech he deleted the word "anger". It was easy to see

Hattersley given Healey's support

He wrote: "Both the front runners are able and attractive men. Neither is an extremist in any sense. But our new leader will have to prove a match on every aspect of policy with a well-briefed Mrs Thatcher in the House.

"He will have to match the experience of Dr David Owen on the box. He will have to stand the course for up to five full years.

"There will be no room for a long process of learning by trial and error. The stakes are far too areat for that. So the argument points to Mr Roy Hattersley, with Mr Neil Kinnock as his

Mr Hattersley's supporters believe that the extent to which the trade unions consult their members on the leadership issue is crucial to his prospects. Yesterday they welcomed the decision of the public em-ployees union (Nupe) to ballot their members.

The poll by Market and Opinion Research International (MORI) in The Sunday Times (MORI) in The Sutternal State of the characteristic of the Clear choice of the Clear c among Labour voters, 56 per cent backing him and 27 per cent Mr Hattersley, the preference of those who voted Tory or Alliance was 45 per cent for Mr Hattersley, 30 per cent for Mr Kinnock and 21 per cent for Mr

As the Hattersley aides were quick to point out, it is among those that did not vote Labour at the election that the new leader must make a great impact. They said that the poll suggests Mr Hattersley is bestplaced to do so.

Meanwhile, the trade union inquest into Labour's election defeat is expected to lead to elements of party policy, includ-ing withdrawal from the EEC and unilateral nuclear disarmament, as the price for future financial backing.

An analysis of the election by

Nature notes

Birds have a busy, preoccupied air, most of them are feeding hungry nestings or fledglings. Finches have begun a second brood goldfinches build again in the swaying outer branches of fruit-trees, linnets in thick bramble bedges. The robin's song begins to falter, the wren's voice dominates the countryside.

Midsummer flowers are out in profusion. Greater stitchwort sprinkles the ground with white among the young bracken plants; it will die as the bracken canopy closes over it. Dog roses line the lanes; busie glows smoky-bite in the hedge-bottoms. The purple flowers of tufted vetch twine round the grasses; grass vetchling, with its long thin leaves, is almost-undetectable in the meadows, until its deep Birds have a busy, preoccupie
